Folklore Nepali Folklore Folklore of Nepal, like the rest of Indian folklore, is rich in folklore regarding the spirits, beings and mystical episodes in Hinduism. According to Nepali mythology, there are many supernatural beings such as rakshasas (vicious monsters) and yakshas (good and benevolent creatures), and all these beings live in the universe. Nepali mythology holds many more supernatural beings, including the vashavriksha (a tree under which a deity resides), the rakshastra (mighty weapons), the tirya (a mythical creature), the maruta and the great siddheshwara (the primordial being in Hindu mythology). Despite the fact that

Nepal is a Hindu country, folk tales of Nepal is rich in Central Asian and Middle Eastern folk tale traditions. The tales are a composite of Hindu mythology and folk tales of the Mughal and Sultan of Chittagong. The tales explain how Buddha created the universe and also how Vishnu, the supreme God in Hindu mythology, created the universe. The stories also go on to explain how the gods decided to create the human race. The stories are rich in satire, irony and Indian fairytales. Many riddles and riddles are included in the folk tales. The folktales explain the origin of the Nepal dialect, the riddles allow the Nepalese to find out a meaning and the satire allows the Nepalese to find out a witty point. There are many superstitions and practices in Nepal such as talismanic rituals and yoga. Although Hinduism has many superstitions, some of the superstitions are unique to Nepal or hold immense popularity. Mangal Temple There are many Hindu temples in Nepal such as the Hindu temples of Nepal, the Rana jatra procession and the Hindu festivals. In the folktales, almost all the Hindu temples include a Yaksha (a supernatural being in Hindu mythology) or a rakshasa (a supernatural monster). The Yaksha usually takes the form of an animal or a tree. The Hindu temples include many deities of Hindu mythology such as Visnu, Shiva, Ganesha, Parvati, Brahma and Devi. Other themes such as
